Loxton driver blows 0.193

A RIVERLAND man has instantly lost his licence after being found driving nearly four times over the legal alcohol limit.

On Saturday 28 December, Loxton Police reported a 48-year-old man, from Loxton, for drink driving.

It will be alleged that he was driving a motor vehicle on Bookpurnong Road, at Loxton North, when he was stopped for a random breath test and returned a positive result of 0.193.

He was issued with a six-month instant loss of licence and had his vehicle impounded for 28 days.

On Sunday 29 December, Murray Mallee Police reported a 62-year-old man, from Paralowie, for driving unlicensed.

The man was stopped at the Yamba quarantine station, and checks revealed he was unauthorised to drive. As a result he had his vehicle impounded for 28 days.

On the same day, Berri Police stopped a car on Tapalin Street, at Renmark, for a random driver test.

Bike stolen at Lyrup home

RIVERLANDERS have been asked to assist investigations into the theft of a motorbike from a local property.

Sometime between Wednesday 25, and Friday 27 December, a motorbike was stolen from a property on Tschirpig Lane, at Lyrup.

The motorbike was a black Yamaha XT1900, with the registration TGV429.

Locals who knows the whereabouts of the motorbike, or has information about the theft, is asked to contact Crime Stoppers.

Information can also be provided anonymously to Crime Stoppers online at (www.crimestopperssa.com.au), or free call 1800 333 000.

Chainsaws stolen from Loxton business

POLICE are investigating a weekend break-in at a Loxton motorcycle and chainsaw dealer.

About 3.15am on Sunday 5 January, offenders cut the padlock on the front gates of Loxton Motorcycle Centre, on Bookpurnong Road, before reversing up to the rear door of the premises.

“The offenders have then forced the rear door before stealing a quantity of Stihl chainsaws and Stihl gardening equipment,” SA Police said in a statement to The Murray Pioneer.

“CCTV images show a light-coloured SUV and three persons are seen to be involved in the break-in.

“The three persons are described as having heavy builds.”

Anyone with information is asked to contact to Crime Stoppers online at https://crimestoppers-sa.com.au or free call 1800 333 000. You can remain anonymous.

Thief strikes twice at local bottle shop

A RIVERLAND woman has been arrested twice in the same week for stealing alcohol from a Berri bottle shop.

About 4.15pm on Saturday 14 December, a woman entered a bottle shop, on Vaughan Terrace, and stole alcohol.

A short time later police caught up with the 44-year-old local woman and reported her for theft. She was also issued with an on the spot fine of $262 for possessing alcohol in a dry zone.

Just before 10am on Monday 16 December, the same 44-year-old woman then entered the bottle shop on Vaughan Terrace and stole more alcohol.

Police again located the woman a short time later and placed her under arrest. She was charged with theft and bailed with conditions to avoid attending the bottle shop.

She will appear in Berri Magistrates Court on 20 January 2025.

A SAPOL statement on the matter said police would “act swiftly on any reports of theft or anti-social behaviour and are committed to making the Riverland area a safe and enjoyable place for people to live, work and do their daily business”.

Locals that witness any anti-social behaviour or offences are encouraged to contact police on 131 444, or report any known information – anonymously – to Crime Stoppers (www.crimestopperssa.com.au) or by phone on 1800 333 000.

No serious injury in Taylorville rollover

EMERGENCY services attended a single vehicle rollover on the Goyder Highway at Markaranka near Taylorville, north of Waikerie, on 27 December.

Police said the driver, a 50-year-old Berri man, was injured in the crash and taken to hospital for treatment.

An SA Police spokesperson said the man’s injuries were considered non-life-threatening.

Investigations into the crash are continuing.

$20.9m funding announced for Murray-Darling Basin water savings... Where's the benefit?

SENIOR Riverland politicians have questioned the potential benefits of a multi-million dollar environmental plan to use treated wastewater – rather than Murray River water – to water public areas and “to supply some industries”.

The Federal and State Governments last month announced $20.9m in funding to build infrastructure allowing local governments to substitute Murray River water with storm water, treated wastewater or other alternative water sources.

The program will generate an estimated water saving of 1270 megalitres, providing 1149 megalitres of South Australian Murray River high security entitlements, aimed to enhance environmental outcomes for the Murray-Darling Basin.

However, Chaffey MP Tim Whetstone said directly supporting Riverland irrigators would be a better use of taxpayer money.

“What we’re seeing is one rule for local government, one rule for SA Water, and another rule for irrigators,” Mr Whetstone said.

“My sums work out at $18,189/ML for this infrastructure, (so) why aren’t they offering that to irrigation communities for infrastructure?”

“As I understand it, about 26GL of water flows out to sea every year from our treatment plants... yet they are going to line the pockets of local government to water parks and gardens with treated water.

“I would like to see that money put into efficiencies, so we can help our farming communities.”

Riverland-based MLC, and opposition spokesperson for regional South Australia, Nicola Centofanti, said further details were needed on the potential outcomes of the initiative.

“It is good to see the state and federal Labor governments getting on board with the water-use efficiency measures that the Liberal Party has been calling on for the last two years,” Dr Centofanti said.

“The efficiency Measures Water Recovery Strategy was announced by the federal Liberal government under then minister for water, Keith Pitt, in March 2021, which instigated state-led programs to substitute Murray River water with treated stormwater and wastewater.

“There are clear benefits of this program reducing pressure on both irrigators and urban water users, especially in dry periods, however, the comment that this will provide ‘1149ML of South Australian entitlements to enhance environmental outcomes’ is not clear if there will be a benefits to irrigators as well as environmental flows.

“Much of this work was started a long time ago, and the call for focus on water efficiency has been loud and clear from the opposition for some time.”

SA Minister for Environment Susan Close said “it is vital that our local governments are able to reduce the amount of water they draw from the Murray-Darling Basin through the use of alternative water sources”.

“This funding is a great example of the Australian and South Australian governments working together to support both local governments and South Australian residents to secure our state’s future water supplies,” Dr Close said.

Federal Minister for the Environment and Water Tanya Plibersek said “improved and more sustainable infrastructure will deliver water savings now and will set us on a path to secure and sustainable water management in the future”.

“South Australia is home to two of our most important water resources – protecting these systems is an investment in Australia’s future,” Ms Plibersek said.

“I thank Minister Close and South Australia for working with us to deliver for their environment and their communities.

“I look forward to continuing to work with all our state and territory counterparts to ensure our water resources and our communities have a more sustainable future.”

Council votes for a mayoral apology

HUGH SCHUITEMAKER

A RIVERLAND mayor could be forced to apologise to his council for remarks a fellow elected member has described as “inappropriate, offensive and insulting”.

A motion requesting Loxton Waikerie Mayor Trevor Norton apologise to his council was moved by Waikerie-based councillor Kent Andrew at the council’s December meeting, and subsequently carried with a 5-3 vote.

The comments related to a discussion at the council’s October meeting regarding the Waikerie Institute.

At last month’s meeting, Mayor Norton declared a conflict of interest and left the chamber, leaving Cr Jody Flavel as the presiding officer when Cr Andrew moved his motion, which was seconded by Cr Clive Matthews.

Cr Andrew’s motion read:

“That Council request Mayor Norton apologise to Council for the comments he made at the council meeting... in relation to the current and ongoing water supply and disposal issues at the Waikerie Institute, which were inappropriate, offensive and insulting, by referencing a lack of action from the former District Council of Waikerie.”

Cr Andrew previously raised the issue publicly at the council’s November meeting, via a question without notice.

The council’s minutes from the November meeting state that:

“Acting Mayor Flavel responded that the question relates to a personal matter and determined that the question was not required to be answered.”

Prior to the apology motion going to a vote last month, Cr Sonya Altschwager called for a division.

Councillors voted mostly down town lines, with Loxton-based councillors Altschwager, Mike Vowles and Craig Ferber all voting against the motion.

Waikerie-based councillors Andrews, Matthews, Ian Light and Gary Pfeiler all voting in the affirmative, along with Loxton North-based Michelle Hill.

The Murray Pioneer contacted Mayor Norton, who said he was currently unable to comment on the matter, while Cr Andrew – a former elected member of the pre-merger Waikerie council and mayor from 1991 to 1993 – provided the same response.

The Pioneer asked Loxton Waikerie CEO

David Beaton about the next step – specifically whether Mayor Norton would be forced to apologise, and if so when – and whether ratepayers could expect to incur any cost over the issue.

Mr Beaton declined to provide answers to any of the questions, but said some of them “are for the Mayor as to his actions”.

The Pioneer understands no deadline has been set for any apology to be issued.

Ian and Bryce in the Loxton spotlight

HUGH SCHUITEMAKER

COMMITMENT to benefitting the surrounding community, and helping fellow Riverlanders, has seen two well-known locals recognised with major council awards. Ian Cass was last month named as the 2025 Loxton Citizen of the Year, with Bryce Westbrook also named Young Citizen of the Year. Mr Cass said following an example provided by his mother, and well-respected local figure, Jan, had led to the award. “I was quite humbled by it, and I didn’t

- expect it at all,” Mr Cass said. “I was quite emotional and there was a few tears, because I was quite surprised, but it’s a lovely honour to have. “I had the ultimate teacher in my mother, Jan, who did so much, for so many, for so long. I learned from Mum.” Mr Cass’ key achievements and contributions to the community include:
- Volunteer at the Loxton Agricultural & Horticultural Show Society.
 - Participant in the TAFE On-Farm Training Scheme and Loxton TAFE Board member and student representative.
 - Loxton student representative on the Riverland TAFE Council.
 - Sheep convenor for the Loxton Show of 37 years and member of the Management Committee.
 - Mallee Board member for the Local Action Planning and vice chairman for eight years.
 - Wunkar Country Fire Service firefighter of 15 years.
 - Participant of numerous working bees at the Loxton Lutheran School, and organiser and co-ordinator of the Lutheran School Continental.
 - Backstage organiser for Rosie Clarke ballett concerts and Riverland Musical Society productions.
 - Involved in Little Town production for 15 years.
 - Played a large role in planning and writing for the Back to Wunkar 2001 book “Wunkar A Harvest of Dreams”
 - Volunteer for Loxton Lutheran School plays and end of year concerts of 11 years.

- Junior basketball coach of 10 years.
 - Helped restart the Loxton Garden Club as president.
- Mr Cass said the contributions of volunteers were vital to keeping numerous local major events, and community and sporting groups operating. “If people don’t volunteer to do all this work, then events and sports won’t happen,” he said. “Our society wouldn’t have what it does without people going out of their way to do things. “We don’t want to see these things go... most country events rely on volunteers. We all work together as a group, and it happens. “Loxton is such a wonderful community, and we support each other. There’s so many people out there doing voluntary work to make sure it happens, and we need that to continue. “There’s a huge amount of hours over a year that go into all of those events, to make them happen, and without them, we wouldn’t be as close a community.” Mr Westbrook said many relatives, friends and fellow locals had congratulated him on the award. “Mum told me and I was very happy,” Mr Westbrook said. “My face was (beaming)... I feel so proud. My Mum wanted to ring my pop and nan, and all my friends, and they were all very impressed. “Being in the community is amazing for me. People see me and say ‘you’re the happiest boy in the world’, they wave and say hello, and know I’m happy because I’m smiling.

“I want to help people in the Riverland, to make them happy, and to help them respect everyone else in the Riverland.” Mr Westbrook has previously been the recipient of:

- Novita Client Government Achievement Awards 2024.
- Gold, Silver and Bronze Duke of Edinburgh Award, received at Government House.
- Head prefect at Riverland Special School (RSS), recognised at Government House
- Woodbury Award (RSS).
- Gold Medal at the South Australian Para Secondary Schools Boys Cross Country.
- Gold Medal at the South Australian Special Olympics in Basketball and awarded best in tournament.

Mr Westbrook said contributing toward the community’s benefit, and acting as a role model for others, had been personally rewarding. “It’s not about (winning awards), it’s about helping yourself, and helping others in the Riverland,” he said. Meanwhile, Christmas Wonderland Loxton was named as Loxton Event of the Year. Loxton Waikerie Mayor Trevor Norton said “these awards highlight the dedication, passion, and selflessness of those who work tirelessly to strengthen the connections that make our district so special”. “From community champions to devoted volunteers, the recipients of this year’s awards exemplify the spirit of generosity and service that keeps our community thriving,” Mr Norton said.

Clare, Nicola debate on tomato support

RIVERLANDERS have been urged to add more tomatoes to their summer diets, after “a bumper crop and some interstate restrictions” have resulted in a South Australian oversupply of the fruit.

A State Government announcement last month advised responses to the Tomato Brown Rugose Fruit virus (ToBRFV) outbreak had caused an oversupply of tomatoes in the state.

Minister for Primary Industries and Regional Development Clare Scriven encouraged consumers to take advantage of current low costs for tomatoes.

“We are currently at the peak of the tomato growing season and, as a result, there is an abundance of tomatoes on South Australian market shelves,” Ms Scriven said.

“I encourage consumers to support our local growers by including fresh tomatoes in as many dishes as possible over the coming summer months.

“The past months have been extraordinarily difficult for the tomato industry, with some interstate trading restrictions hitting growers particularly hard.

“We have done everything we can to assist growers in meeting the certification requirements to access WA and Queensland markets as quickly as possible, including opening a dedicated lab here in Adelaide.”

However, Riverland-based MLC, and opposition spokesperson for South Australia, Nicola Centofanti said a direct consumer campaign – similar to the 2018 ‘cut them up, not cut them out’ initiative in response to the discovery of needles in strawberries – was needed in order to support tomato growers.

“While I appreciate the Minister’s sentiment, talk is cheap and the Labor Government must put their money where their mouth is,” Dr Centofanti said.

“In fact, this does not even need to be new money. This campaign could and should be driven out of the government’s existing budget. Isn’t this what the Department of State Development exists for – to promote local products and industry?

“Many growers are telling me their tomatoes are ripe and ready with nowhere to go due to continuing delays in testing and they are worried that their crops will be wasted if not consumed locally.

“Good, targeted marketing campaigns work, and it is critical that the Government works in a timely manner to deliver a campaign that ensures our South Australian tomato growers survive into the future. The greatest support that all South Australians can give the industry is to keep buying tomatoes this summer.”

Ms Scriven said following successful containment measures, the State Government was “well on the way to achieving eradication of this virus”.

“If the virus had spread across the state and country, it would have devastating consequences on all tomato, capsicum and chilli growers every single year,” Ms Scriven said.

More information on PIRSA’s ToBRFV response, including market access requirements, is available on the PIRSA ToBRFV website (pir.sa.gov.au/tobrfv).

Refurnished Guide Hall opens its doors

MADISON EASTMOND

THE Renmark Girl Guide Hall is close to completing an $82,000 refurbishment, with the renovated space preparing to open its doors to long-term and new Riverland members of all ages.

Receiving a total of $50,000 from the Department of Primary Industries and Regions in 2023, along with a $4000 community support grant from Renmark Paringa Council, and a further $28,000 from the Girl Guide SA Development Fund, the Renmark Girl Guide Hall has undergone major refurbishments over the past two years, with the local building reroofed and externally recladded.

While still waiting on a back veranda and front alcove to come, and with future plans for landscaping and a refresh of the interior space, Renmark Guide leader Emily Griggs said while the hall was “still an ongoing project” the organisation was excited for local members to enjoy the restorations.

Recently returning to the organisation after concluding her previous role as principal of Berri Regional Secondary College (BRSC), over the past two years Ms Griggs has become an active Guide leader and has seen the local organisation grow to 16 consistent members.

Joined by her daughter, Lillian, at the beginning of last year, Ms Griggs hopes girls and women across the Riverland consider becoming part of the Renmark, Berri, Barmera, or Special School Guide community, and enjoy the “vast” and “long-term benefits” of being a member or a leader.

“I was involved in Guides with my sister when I was a girl, and whether I knew it at the time or not, the skills and confidence I learned were fundamental in my growth (as a young woman),” she said.

“Coming back to Guides now, I have a much broader perspective and respect (for the organisation).

“As a young girl, you do not understand deeply how important it is to develop such confidence and capabilities — it is an organisation that helps young women build courage, empowerment, confidence, and develop a range of skills so they can be active citizens and leaders in their own life, as well as in their community.

“Lillian has been able to meet new people and learn real life skills since joining Guides last year... and it’s such a special thing to be able to do together.

“Guides creates important memories.”

The last of its kind as an organisation in the region since the Riverland Scouts recently closed their doors, Ms Griggs said Girl Guides was a unique and significant program for young rural women that needs to be supported by the local community.

“Many organisations like Guides have closed because of the need for volunteers to keep them running,” she said.

“We are hoping our Guide Hall will now be of interest to community groups and organisations for hire.

“Since we only use it once a week and the majority of our funding is used to maintain the building, it would be great to be able to subsidise the cost.

“We would also love more members and leaders.

“I would encourage any girl or woman in the Riverland to become a member... take part in volunteering, or becoming part of the leadership team for Guides.

“Guides is such an important organisation that can do amazing things for young women in our community, as well as give back significantly.”

Girl Guides Riverland will be hosting a Come n Try day on Monday 17 February at Barmera, from 6:30pm, at Berri, from 5pm, and Renmark, 5:30pm. There will be free water-themed activities for girls aged from 5 years old, and girls will be able to visit three times before becoming a member.

For more information on becoming a Renmark Girl Guides leader, email (renmark@girlguidessa.org.au).

THE YEARS GO BY

LoxStory, Peter and Carla Magarey

The volunteer dilemma

AN unforced tendency for most locals to support each other is often one of the more fortunate aspects of life in the Riverland.

Each year, January provides us the opportunity to put a spotlight on the selflessly inspirational figures in the community, through each council’s citizen, and young citizen of the year awards.

However, while celebrating the achievements and contributions of such locals is important, it is also vital that the surrounding community recognises the increasing difficulty in finding new volunteers, particularly those who are willing to dedicate such time, over so many years, as an Ian Cass or Alan Eckermann.

This growing challenge is no single person’s or entity’s fault, it is clear for anyone to see that added financial, employment and family pressures is for most adults eating into the spare time that could otherwise be used to coach a children’s sports team, or volunteer for the CFS or SES.

While nobody can be blamed for this, the flow-on impacts are becoming more and more common for Riverland clubs and community groups. Far too often we are now seeing long-serving volunteers, who need to step down from senior roles on committees due to age or health restrictions, with nobody else in a position to be able to take over.

The announcement that Waikerie’s Neighbourhood Watch branch would be shutting down – as detailed in today’s edition – is another clear example of this. After 34 years of involvement with the group – since its inception – co-ordinator Lynette Nitschke retired, and a replacement has yet to step forward.

Now, one could argue that Neighbourhood Watch lacks the glamour and excitement compared to volunteering as a football or netball coach, however, it remains an important and appreciated, perhaps even underappreciated, community group.

We can also look to the challenges in recruiting new volunteers being experienced by local emergency service groups, which has forced a number of CFS and SES branches towards the brink of closure.

It seems like all sections of the community are suffering from this vulnerability. If we see such organisations potentially having to fold at the moment, is a lack of volunteer coaches next going to hit sporting clubs for instance?

But where does the answer lie? Extra time, sadly, is unable to be produced from thin air, and for many, economic commitments will understandably be prioritised over potential volunteer duties.

Developing a desire to volunteer toward the benefit of the community among young people is probably then crucial, and such desire is evident in Loxton’s new Young Citizen of the Year Bryce Westbrook.

Young people are seemingly currently experiencing a social environment of growing negativity and isolation when spending most of the time behind screens. Conversely, and as Bryce points out, there are self-rewards to volunteering, and most involved with community groups or sports teams will attest to the social connections that can be created.

A quick consideration of some of the events and facilities in the Riverland that would shut down without volunteers paints a bleak picture, and many local groups would see a big difference with even one more person becoming involved.

Who are they? An interesting family photograph (left) was recently found behind a coloured print (right) in an old wooden frame. The identity of the family is being investigated by LoxStory, the district’s archive group, for Loxton-resident Deb Griffiths. The framed print belonged to her recently passed sister, Jan Paterson. Neither she nor her family can identify who this fine photo is of, their details, and if they would like the photo returned. The photographed clothing gives clues to its date. Contrary to usual expectations, people in the 1800-1900s changed fashion quite frequently, especially the younger ladies. The clues for women include dress style (skirt length and sleeves), hats and hair style. Men changed the style and the cut of their suit jackets, waistcoats, collars and ties, and their hair styles (including facial hair). Their hats are also a good indicator. Other helpful clues include the ‘sudden’ appearance of shaggy rugs in studio pictures

best guess is that the photo was taken around 1905 to 1910. The artwork is print Number 1290, entitled ‘Well Guarded’ by NB Roney. Who is the family; any clues? INVESTIGATOR: Carolyn Wood. PHOTO: Deb Griffiths.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Opinions expressed in Letters to the Editor are those of the writers, and not those of the Murray Pioneer.

‘Fear mongering’ claim disappoints

I AM very disappointed with the recent article in The Murray Pioneer regarding claims of “fear mongering” by the Renmark Paringa Council (‘Have no fear’, 24/12/24).

Firstly, who released the story?

Obviously, someone who does not understand the feelings of the Renmark people, and does not realise the council and employees are working for the ratepayers of Renmark Paringa Council.

They would do well to remember this.

I have personally written to council about the stupidity of the extension of the Jane Eliza, and have also spoken to the CEO.

The fears in recent letters contained in previous Pioneers is well founded. I personally believe this proposed development should be put to the ratepayers to vote on, as it is a very controversial point and expansion of Renmark in this area does not make any sense at all.

There are too many unknowns, including:

- ❑ Who covers the insurance?
- ❑ Has the council not learned anything from the recent floods?
- ❑ A hydrology report would have to be negative considering the area in question.
- ❑ ‘Expert advice’ from whom?
- ❑ Expanded marina? I’m not sure if the houseboat industry requires more new boats.
- ❑ Boat maintenance area. I understand a very strong proposal has been put to council by some very interested houseboat business owners to purchase the old Jane Eliza site and redevelop the slip, pay the bills owing to council from previous owners and redevelop the office.
- ❑ Has the council not noticed how much salt damp is already showing in the original Jane Eliza area?

If the council is interested in the development of townhouses or apartments, why not look at the area from the NAB to the corner of Murray Avenue, and Renmark Avenue?

The shops that are there now could be part of the new development with the apartments and townhouses built above. This would be a great opportunity now the Westpac Bank has gone, with one of the best views of the river now available.

I think most ratepayers are not happy and are not ‘fear mongering’.

I challenge the council to put it to an extraordinary ratepayers’ vote, before spending more of ratepayers’ hard-earned money.

Fear mongering accusations

REGARDING the front page of The Murray Pioneer on 24 December 2024 (‘Have no fear’), yes, I agree council has as much right to an opinion as do the public, but I feel we are being realists.

The letter to editor that I submitted on 11 December (‘Floodplains there for a reason’) was only a portion of an email I forwarded to Wel.Co Group on 19 November 2022, during the flood. The email to them included photos of the Jane Eliza floodplain underwater.

A copy went to Prime Minister Anthony Albanese, SA Premier Peter Malinauskas, Barker MP Tony Pasin and Chaffey MP Tim Whetstone. Mr Malinauskas forwarded it to the Minister for Planning Nick Champion. I received a reply from Mr Champion, on 9 January 2023, which I have included with this letter to the editor.

The recent article in The Pioneer goes on to say council is working with “experts”.

A section that was not used in my original letter to the editor, but was in my email to Wel.Co, was for them to ask for the two feasibility studies that were done by council on the Jane Eliza Development, which I believe show that “experts’ say it was not viable.

Yet they seem to have ignored that advice and still proceeding? What is it costing council each time another consultant is employed? What has this proposal cost so far?

I personally do not have an issue with a purpose-built marina, which if flooded should not impact flows or flood levels.

Ed: Mr Champion’s letter to Ms Ryan is printed on page 32.

Queries about council development

THE article titled ‘Have no fear’ (Pioneer, 24/12/24), in my view, puts down those in this community who see the proposed housing development on the floodplain as a disaster.

The suggestion that the Renmark Paringa Council made the decision to publish this seems to be misleading, as our inquiries indicate that elected members were not informed and were not able to vote on the matter.

So, it appears the article originated from someone employed by council offering his/her own opinion, and that it is not a position or policy of council.

Not a good look, putting down who you owe your position to.

Logic tells us that answering questions from your ratepayers is a much better way of communication – and here are a couple of such queries:

❑ How can the development be protected against 1956 equivalent volumes of floodwater at 340GL, now known to create a height level estimated at a metre higher?

❑ Have there been two (or more) investigations into the feasibility of the project, resulting in ‘not feasible’ conclusions?

❑ What are the totals costs to date of the proposal?

❑ Can we ratepayers be guaranteed the project can be protected against floods and will reasonable-cost insurance be available?

q What liability would fall on council if the project failed at any stage, including completion?

Of course there are many more queries, and probably the only way to get answers is for council to come out with complete and open transparency.

And, in future, I would say “concerned citizens/ratepayers” is a much more respectful way of addressing Renmark’s “fear-mongers”.

Jane Eliza plan transparency?

THE Jane Eliza Estate development in Renmark should not go ahead.

Concerns from locals are not “scare mongering”.

The feelings of those expressing these concerns are based on past history, and if you think for one minute we won’t have another flood with a huge impact on the community, then in my view you really are dreaming.

Where do you think the water that covered the floodplain in the last flood is going to go, and where will your experts be when this happens? I think they will be ducking for cover with their floaties on.

Even our Prime Minister of the day said we have to stop building on floodplains. What do you think he meant by that?

As for the marina, well there will be even fewer houseboats to even go close to filling it, as a vast majority of private boats have left the area – I believe due to the actions of the council.

So, that just leaves commercial hire boats, and I doubt that they will want to be in a marina.

The costs will impact their businesses, forcing them to pass on the cost in hire fees, which will limit the affordability to a lot of people wanting to holiday on our beautiful river. Hence the economic benefits of the houseboat industry to local businesses

There has been no community consultation on this proposed development since 2018, which I think says a lot about transparency.

How much of ratepayers' money has been spent over the time since this development was started? I'm guessing in the millions.

And how much is yet to be spent?

All answers to the above I'm sure council will claim are 'commercial in confidence'.

Again there's no transparency, and you wonder why people doubt the operation of this council.

BBC ratepayers like mushrooms

IN reply to Chris Page's letter in The Murray Pioneer ('Expensive Berri Barmera offices', Pioneer, 18/12/24), I agree with everything he has said.

If the Berri Town Hall was owned privately, could an owner simply close the doors and walk away? I doubt it.

It is a fair assumption that it would have to be repaired as soon as possible.

Let's face it, alleged mould can be eradicated. Alleged structural damage can be repaired.

The alleged report from the independent inspector must be buried deep in the abyss of the revolving filing cabinet, because I cannot find it.

I firmly believe Berri Barmera Council has no intention of going back to the old offices.

I am not saying it will continue to rent where it is indefinitely. I do believe it has a three-year lease currently.

I believe Berri Barmera Council has plans to build a new set of offices somewhere. It would tie-in with what the other two councils have done.

First it was Renmark Paringa, then Loxton Waikerie. They all got out of their old buildings and built new ones.

In my opinion it has been the plan all along, but at what cost to you and me?

How much more will Berri Barmera Council put its ratepayers into debt?

What is worse is you, the people, let them. Yeah, sure, plenty of people I talk to support what Chris Page and I have to say, but unfortunately no one else will back it up.

What are the future plans for the Berri Barmera Council moving back into the old building, or aren't there any plans?

In my opinion the council has no transparency and treats its ratepayers like mushrooms: kept

Gee, the corellas are noisy at the moment, I guess they are upset because there's not much more lawn to rip up.

WHAT NEXT?: BLISTERING heat, balmy nights and now pouring rain: the Riverland has seen it all this week. Following a string of hot, dry days – including a top of 45C on Saturday – humidity hit a steamy 90 per cent by early yesterday morning ahead of predicted thunderstorms. Up to 80mm of rain – about a third of the district's average annual rainfall – is predicted to fall over today and tomorrow, with a further 10mm expected on Sunday.

Waikerie loses its Neighbourhood Watch

CHRISTINE WEBSTER

A VOLUNTEER organisation committed to preventing crime in the Waikerie area has gone into recess after 34 years of operation. Waikerie Neighbourhood Watch met for the last time at a lunch at the Waikerie Club on 5 December. The group consisted of 25 zone leaders, who between them donated a total of 379 years. Three of these volunteers were with the organisation since its inception 34 years ago. At the final meeting, Waikerie Neighbourhood Watch’s former police co-ordinator Dave Miller presented certificates and badges of service to the group members who attended. Mr Miller served in the police co-ordinator’s role for many years. Past area coordinator of the organisation, Lynette Nitschke, said the role of these zone leaders included delivering 1000 newsletters, each quarter, across Waikerie and surrounding areas. She said the group lost its police co-ordinator in the middle of last year, after he transferred to the Barossa Valley and a replacement could not be found. “Not having police input was a big part of why we felt the group could not continue,” Mrs Nitschke said. She said a reduction in staff numbers at Waikerie meant police could no longer provide a co-ordinator. Mrs Nitschke served in the voluntary role of Waikerie Neighbourhood Watch area co-ordinator for 24 years, and had given 12 months’ notice of her intention to retire from the role by December. Unfortunately, her efforts to find a replacement for herself have so far been unsuccessful, which was another main reason for the organisation folding. “I felt like I needed a break, I have reached a time in my life where I feel I need to be able to go on holidays,” she said. “I enjoyed it, it was great, and I loved it, but there comes a time in your life when you need to change tack a little bit.” Mrs Nitschke said being an area coordinator had meant that she had to also attend regional meetings as well. “We did keep in touch with all the other areas to ensure we knew what was going on there,” she said. “We learnt from other towns as well and if we thought someone had a good idea, we would try and include that into what we did also.” Mrs Nitschke said the Barmera and Renmark branches of Neighbourhood Watch also folded last year, and Loxton was the only town that still had one. “People are no longer attending Neighbourhood Watch meetings and all of the area co-ordinators have been doing it for a long time,” she said. Waikerie Neighbourhood Watch decided at its final meeting to transfer its remaining funds to the Riverland Neighbourhood Group, to purchase safety alarms for people affected by domestic violence. Mrs Nitschke said if an area co-ordinator could be found in the future, the organisation could re-open, as Suzi Huf was still offering her services as area secretary. “I would be happy to explain to anyone who is interested about what the requirements are,” she said.

State headquarters pays tribute to Lynette

NEIGHBOURHOOD Watch (NHW) SA has paid tribute to long-serving Waikerie volunteer Lynette Nitschke, describing her as “one of the incredible people” who has been a part of the organisation almost from the start. The state-wide part of the organisation is celebrating its 40th anniversary this year, with Waikerie Neighbourhood Watch operating for 34 years, before it folded last month. One of the main reasons the group had to fold was because an area co-ordinator to replace Mrs Nitschke, who retired last month, was unable to be found, even though she gave 12-months’ notice of her plans. “It’s understandable that Lynette would like to hand the batten to someone else after 24 years and it’s disappointing that no one has been found to take her place,” a NHW spokesperson said. The Renmark and Barmera NHW groups have also closed. “NHW SA provides fantastic opportunities for community members to undertake activities to improve safety and build important community connections, so we never like to see a group fold,” the spokesperson said. “We can support NHW groups that are struggling by providing tailored resources for distribution that promote the group as well as ideas to take the group in a new, more sustainable direction.” The NHW spokesperson said South Australia Police (SAPOL) Crime Prevention Sections can also hold public information meetings in regional areas to recruit new members and gauge the level of community interest in maintaining a group. “All regional NHW groups are supported by their local SAPOL Crime Prevention Section, which is responsible for engaging with the local community to prevent and reduce crime, providing information, education, and law enforcement,” the spokesperson said. “For allocating resources such as police co-ordinators, NHW volunteers can contact their SAPOL Crime Prevention Section if they require additional support. “NHW SA has recently started rolling out NHW Facebook groups and, in selecting groups for the roll out, gives consideration to those that require reinvigoration.” Riverland residents interested in joining or starting a NHW group can email (sapolmurraymalleecrimeprevention@police.sa.gov.au) or phone the Murray Bridge Crime Prevention Section on 8535 6345, or the Berri Crime prevention Section on 8595 2023 for more information.

Renmark and Paringa Historical Society formed

MADISON EASTMOND

A RENMARK and Paringa Historical Society has recently been formed, with passionate locals dedicated to collecting, digitising, and protecting the district's past and guaranteeing it can be used for future generations.

Formed to collect information and protect it through digitisation, the Renmark and Paringa Historical Society was formed late last year to undertake the momentous task of gathering and uncovering historical material of the region to capture its past.

"It has taken almost two years to get the (Historical Society) to this point," Renmark and Paringa Historical Society public officer Richard Mast said.

"It seems very logical that the district needed this type of society and the community has been asking for it a long time.

"So far, we have had a really good response.

"We have received many family histories, as well as documentation from organisations which is very significant. The community has lost many organisations, such as Scouts, over the years, so if these organisations have documents, photographs, artefacts, pieces of material and so on, we need to find them, because that's the stuff that represents the history of our community during that period of time we can't access any other way."

Along with rebuilding and understanding Renmark and Paringa's history, Mr Mast said the not-for-profit society is working towards developing a website that all locals will eventually have free access to.

"Over these past two years we have set up a system that can catalogue any historical information that comes our way," he said.

"If physical artefacts have to be kept, they will be stored at (local historical museums), but the goal is to digitise every document, photograph, and convert every video or slide, which then will be uploaded, or have the location of the information logged, on the website.

"To understand our past and to have context of where we live can connect the lives of the individual to the history of the district.

"We want to be able to make sure this information is all shared, so we need to locate any and everything we can, and then of course, get the permission to digitise it — this is our main focus currently."

With plans to develop a membership to the society, Mr Mast said the organisation was also looking for volunteers to participate in its endeavour to recover local history, with roles including:

- ❑ Finding photos, documents, videos, slides, logs, journals, newspaper clippings, posers, postcards, and anything that represents personal or the district's history.
- ❑ Identifying individuals,

Renmark and Paringa Historical Society secretary Barb Binder with local history the society have collected since forming late last year.

organisations, businesses, clubs who have, or could have, historical material.

- ❑ Identifying individuals who are prepared to share their oral history.
- ❑ Cataloguing, scanning, and photographing historical material into digital form.
- ❑ Research to verifying information about and within the historical material, including dates, locations, purpose, events, and names of individuals.

For more information on the Renmark and Paringa Historical Society, to volunteer, or submit historical information to the organisation, contact Barb Binder on 0408 895 532.

$750k helping hand for new Loxton rentals

NEW rental houses will be built in a Riverland town in an attempt to increase accommodation options for key workers.

The State Government last month announced $750,000 in funding – through the $10m Regional Housing Initiatives Program – for Adelaide-based Cornerstone Housing to assist in the delivery of 15 long-term rental dwellings in Loxton.

Minister for Housing Nick Champion said regional communities were "important economic generators, but housing is incredibly limited, so the government is investing in these 10 projects to enable further growth".

"The Malinauskas Labor Government is helping kickstart important housing developments across regional South Australia, to help get these projects off the ground," Mr Champion said.

"Our regions "These projects are subject to the successful outcome of final commercial negotiations with the preferred partners but have the potential to deliver more than 200 housing outcomes in areas of our state it is needed most."

Locals rescue missing jet skiers

CHRISTINE WEBSTER

A MAN and woman from Adelaide, who had to be rescued on Thursday evening after their jet ski overturned on the Murray River, are grateful to the quick actions of two Waikerie men who found them.

Simon Jenke, and his son Nathan, decided to help search for the couple after learning through social media they had been reported missing, after failing to return to the Number 2 Boat Ramp, at Edgar Bartlett Drive, at Waikerie.

“Since we share a love of the river and we know the area like the back of our hand, we decided to hop in our boat to try and find them,” Mr Jenke said.

He said they found the couple about a kilometre downstream from the Number 2 Boat Ramp and the jet ski, which had become submerged with water, was located about 1.5km further away.

“We took them back to the boat ramp and then planned to retrieve the jet ski, which had sunk,” Mr Jenke said.

But on their way to retrieve the jet ski, Mr Jenke and his son had to assist two men whose jet-ski had also broken down.

Mr Jenke said the men had managed to move the couple’s jet ski to a safe place on the river bank, but it was still half submerged, when their own jet ski stopped working.

He said fortunately everyone ended up being safe.

Mr Jenke said he understood the jet ski would be retrieved by a property owner located close to where it became submerged.

He said he and his son made the decision to help the couple because they hoped others would do the same thing for them if they found themselves in trouble.

Mr Jenke said they knew it would take the Barmera SES about 30 minutes to reach the scene.

In February last year, Mr Jenke and Nathan’s heroic actions also saved the life

“ We decided to hop in our boat to try and find them... ”

- Simon Jenke

of a Monash man who was driving a station wagon that collided with a stobie pole at a service station, on the Sturt Highway, at Waikerie.

Mr Jenke, after noticing the accident and the stobie pole on fire, rushed into the View Point Café and grabbed a fire extinguisher and put out the fire, before the CFS and emergency services arrived.

Ramco resident, and Loxton Waikerie councillor, Clive Matthews also supported relatives of the couple who were reported missing on Thursday evening.

Mr Matthews, who was at his home situated close to the Murray River, was working in his shed when he heard two men yelling out in an attempt to locate the jet skiers.

“They just happened to pull up by my drive way, so I raced down there, as I had assumed that someone may have had an accident,” he said.

Mr Matthews attempted to locate the yellow jet-ski and the couple with his drone, but was unsuccessful.

He then decided to try and assist in the search, by taking his tinny to the boat ramp, but was grateful to see Mr Jenke and his son were taking part in the rescue effort.

A spokesperson for SAPOL said just after 8pm, on Thursday 2 January, police received reports of an overturned jet-ski at Waikerie.

They said the pair were rescued and their jet ski was found nearby.

Barmera SES also attended. The police spokesperson said no serious injuries were reported.

The family expressed to The Murray Pioneer they were thankful to police and emergency services and the members of the local community who came out to find them.

Funding to help prevent suicide in the Riverland

MADISON EASTMOND

A RIVERLAND suicide prevention network is one of many South Australian sporting clubs and community volunteer groups that has received funding to support initiatives and training to address suicide in local communities.

The Riverland Community Suicide Prevention Network last week received $4760 from the State Government’s Suicide Prevention Community Grants, with the funding planned to be used towards free community education and training sessions in the new year.

“It’s going towards training sessions with the CORESS (Community Response to Eliminating Suicide) program (that have been previously delivered) to schools, local community, and sporting clubs,” Riverland Community Suicide Prevention Network chair Val Fewster said.

“The aim of the program is to empower people to recognise the signs of suicide, intervene before a crisis occurs, and lead the person at risk to the appropriate service.

“Our goal is to have a Riverland without suicide, and the CORES program raises awareness and reduces stigma around suicide, and it engages people in the community no matter what their background may be.

“There has been a lot of mental health education that has been undertaken in the region, but there is only a small amount of suicide information in those programs — the CORES program focuses on suicide and it’s prevention.”

At a time where the Riverland region has been hit with frost and rain, with many farmers losing their harvest, Ms Fewster said the grant has come at a good moment to aid the community.

“We will certainly use the grant money in the most meaningful way,” Ms Fewster said.

“Whether that be short courses in schools, or progress the courses around the Riverland, starting with Berri Barmera, and then Renmark and Waikerie.

“We are hoping to engage

70 people in the course, and if we do, more than 200 community members will benefit from that education (being used and applied in the Riverland).”

Premier’s Advocate for Suicide Prevention Nadia Clancy said “by prioritising suicide prevention, (the state) can break the stigma surrounding mental health and encourage open conversations when people need them, wherever they are”.

“Access to mental health resources through prevention programs can be the lifeline someone desperately needs,” she said.

“We want to have empowered communities across South Australia, who can help their neighbour, teammate, or friend when they’re struggling, or know where to get them the support they need.”

If you or someone you know needs mental health support, contact Lifeline on 13 11 14, the Rural and Remote Mental Health Service 13 14 65, Mental Health Triage on 13 14 65, Suicide Call Back Service on 1300 659 467, or Beyond Blue on 1300 22 4636.

Riverland Special School achieve high in the Premier's Challenge

MADISON EASTMOND

THE Riverland Special School has been named one of the state's high achievers in the Premier's be active Challenge. With 75 per cent of Riverland Special School students taking part, the be active Challenge is an initiative that aims to promote physical activity and wellbeing from reception to year 12, with medals awarded to each student who completed at least one hour of physical activity, five days a week, for a month. "The Premier's be active Challenge is something that happens every year at the (Riverland Special) School, and we encourage and support our students to participate," Riverland Special School principal Natalie Coote said. "Our students engage in a range of physical activities and a range of different sports, while also doing fitness sessions each morning. "For us, the social skills learned are just as important as the physical. "Taking turns, sharing — all are important attributes and skills we want to equip our young people with. "It has been wonderful to be recognised as a high-achieving school, as we do put in a lot of effort in promoting a healthy lifestyle to our students and a variety of physical activities, so when they are in the wider community they will feel comfortable and confident to engage in a range of different activities." Minister for Education, Training, and Skills Blair Boyer said "this year, more than 35,000 students completed the be active Challenge — the most in almost a decade". "That's an incredible result, and one that our schools right across South Australia should be proud of," Mr Boyer said. "Physical activity is an important way to engage students — it teaches resilience, working towards a goal and teamwork: all critical skills our students need when they leave school."

RURAL DOCTORS ASSOCIATION OF AUSTRALIA

Safety for summer in the Riverland

THE Rural Doctors Association of Australia (RDAA) is warning Riverlanders to be aware of heatstroke and to take care when cooling off in inland rivers, dams, and lakes. "As the temperatures rise, we need to ensure we are staying well hydrated by drinking plenty of water, applying sun protection like broad-brimmed hats and sunscreen, and staying out of direct sunlight and radiant heat so we don't end up needing to be treated in hospital for heat exhaustion or heat-stroke," RDAA president Raymond Lewandowski said.

"While we know that farmwork doesn't stop over the summer holidays, it is best not to keep working outside in the middle of a scorching summer day. "Look to work in the early morning and then late in the afternoon and evening, and have the middle of the day off."

With drownings being as much of a danger in inland waterways as at coastal beaches, RDAA advice for safety surrounding local rivers, dams, or lakes includes:

- ❑ Always closely supervise children around water.
- ❑ If you are not a strong swimmer, don't swim.
- ❑ Don't eat a huge meal before going for a swim.
- ❑ Don't drink alcohol before going swimming, and don't swim while intoxicated or under the influence of drugs.
- ❑ Don't go swimming alone, and don't swim too far from shore.
- ❑ Wear a life jacket, particularly if you are going to be in a boat or undertaking activities like water skiing.
- ❑ Know what is in the water in inland waterways, to ensure you are not diving or water skiing into shallow areas, rocks and submerged branches.

South Aussies urged to donate responsibly to charities

BY donating unwanted gifts and usable items responsibly these holidays, Riverlanders can support charities, reduce waste, and spread goodwill across the state. Many charities across the state have recently faced a recurring issue of donations being left outside of shops after hours. These items are often rummaged through, scattered across car parks, or ruined by the weather.

Charities can be helped by:

- ❑ Ensuring items are clean and usable.
- ❑ Dropping items off inside stores during trading hours, or by using outdoor donation bins responsibly.
- ❑ Stick to the charity's accepted item list.

Usable items that most charities will accept include quality clothing and accessories, toys, books, CDs and DVDs, home-wares, furniture and small electrical goods. "Let's respect the vital work these charities do by giving clean, usable items and making sure they're dropped off responsibly," Minister for Human Services Nat Cook said. "When you donate thoughtfully, you're helping charities transform the lives of those who might be doing it tough. You're putting kindness into action.

"Charities can't afford to clean up after careless dumping. I urge all South Australians to be part of the solution. Donate respectfully, during trading hours or in designated donation bins. "Charity dumping isn't just inconvenient — it diverts resources away from people in need. Let's show we care by donating with purpose. Let's make sure every gift counts."

A night of magic at the Chaffey stage

AUSTRALIA'S most successful magician, illusionist and escape artist is set to amaze Riverland audiences this month.

Cosentino will return to the region, with a performance of his show 'Decennium the Greatest Hits Tour', at the Chaffey Theatre, on Saturday 18 January.

In the 10 years since Cosentino became an overnight sensation on Australia's Got Talent (AGT), he has gone on to become a household name here in Australia and a genuine super-star on the global stage.

'Decennium the Greatest Hits Tour' is a 90-minute stage spectacular, which was written, produced, and choreographed by Cosentino. Watch as he performs his most death-defying escapes that will thrill your senses, his greatest mind-boggling stage illusions and cutting-edge street magic that twists your view of reality.

Cosentino said the show was a celebration of everything he has achieved over the last decade.

"The last 10 years have been incredible for me, both professionally and personally," he said. "Australia really got to know me via AGT and since then I have toured consistently to full houses across the globe, was the first Australian magician ever to create nine prime-time TV specials that have been screened throughout the world, have become a multiple best-selling author, and even had a feature in a Hollywood movie. What a ride it has been.

"All of the pieces in this show have been chosen for a reason as they represent a significant time and place within my career.

"I'm so proud of 'Decennium the Greatest Hits Tour', it's the best production I have ever created, and I can't wait to take it on the road. I can assure fans, young and old, that this is one show that you definitely do not want to miss."

For further information, and to book tickets, visit the Country Arts SA website (www.countryarts.org.au/events/cosentino-decennium-the-greatest-hits-tour-2/).

The Murray Pioneer is also giving four lucky readers a chance to attend the Chaffey Theatre show.

Simply fill in the entry form below and return it to the The Murray Pioneer office, in Renmark, by 14 January.

It's in the incentive

It's the middle of a bumper apricot season and the fruit is coming off the trees thick and fast.

Dad is generally a calm man, so this change in his behaviour catches our attention. He's just added another picker for a few days to ensure the apricots don't fall on the ground. He is stressed.

The apricots are almost over-ripe and can't sit in the dip tins for long.

There's a big effort needed today, Dad declares, so if we can get three full stacks cut, we'll go to Lake Bonney for a swim tonight.

A feverish response ignites the shed. Dad uses these incentives selectively. We get to work. There's still chatter and laughter – if only to ease the boredom, stiff back, and aching legs – but our speed is constant, and lunchtime is unusually short. Motivation is not waning.

Finally, although we finish after five, three sulphur houses are under wraps. Relief, but no time to celebrate as everyone, our cousins included, dash home to change into bathers and grab a towel.

The station wagon fits 10 of us with ease and we're headed to Barmera via the Tarcoola Street bumps, where our stomachs' ups and downs mirror those of the road.

Turning right, we head to Barmera. Up the hill and past the golf course, a destination that seemed a place for the more leisurely people. Later as a young adult, I'd play a round of golf with a girlfriend in our bikinis and sneakers on a 40-degree day when no-one, but sprinklers, were around.

Up and over the hill and there's the Riverland Raceway. We'd been there once or twice. Today, I reflect with respect at the ease with which kids roamed around freely in the dark when the event lost a youngster's interest.

We whiz past the Lyrup turnoff – that winding, dusty road to our grandparents' place taken on many a Sunday, and when crossing the river, the punt man baggiped us with his ancestral Scottish tunes.

Amid the chatter, I look for the swaggie, the mysterious man who often walked this part of the road alone, corks hanging from his hat, and us kids wondering where he slept at night.

On the left are the 5RM antenna. My child's mind never understood how they worked, and it still doesn't.

Seeing the Berri Cannery in full swing was strangely reassuring, the odour less so. Hundreds of workers' cars in the carpark were evidence of enormous activity and therefore the demand for our Riverland products. I just assumed that would never change.

Next, we approach Earth's most enchanting place on a Saturday night for a family in a station wagon – the Berri Drive-In. We'll catch some passing moments of a 'silent to us' movie on the way back.

I quietly acknowledge the Berri Hospital where Mum apparently delivered me, because the Renmark Hospital was inundated by the inconceivable levels of the 1956 flood.

It had already been a long, hot day and impatience is growing as we glide through Glossop and past the high school. Later we'd meet them in interschool sports day battles.

Barmera is approaching, and the challenge to see who'll be the first to hit the cool waters of the lake is on. However, those in the boot have already lost.

Finally, everyone is in, duck diving, jumping, diving – or was it bellyflopping – swimming, floating, yelling, bombing, racing – and happiness is complete. Lake Bonney welcomes everyone with open arms.

Dad looks relaxed and Mum has gone to the café for fish and chips. Honestly, what more could any kid ask for?

Guest speaker at the 2024 presentation evening was Waikerie High School old scholar Jack Francis.

Mr Francis attended the school from 2000 to 2004, and established a career in engineering and asset management, supporting the Australian Defence sector.

He is presently the director of a small asset management company and is involved in the life-of-type extension of Collins-class submarines.

Mr Francis was commissioned as a mechanical engineering officer in the Australian Regular Army.

His military highlights include serving in Afghanistan in 2013, as part of Operation Slipper, and later contributing to global operations in the United Arab Emirates.

Mr Griffiths thanked all the sponsors that “generously supported the evening”.

“All proceeds go directly to the students on the night and we are grateful for your continued support,” he said.

Lindsay Point hit by fruit fly

FRUIT fly response activities in the Lindsay Point area will be ramped up over the next few weeks following the recent declaration of the Lindsay Point B Queensland fruit fly outbreak.

With the total number of outbreaks in the Riverland now at 55, officers from the Department of Primary Industries and Regions (PIRSA) are applying approved bait and monitoring for any further signs of fruit fly in the affected areas.

Local residents and businesses will also receive information in relation to the outbreak and associated response activities.

Residents, workers, travellers and others who may be impacted by the Lindsay Point B outbreak are advised to search their address on the fruit fly interactive outbreak map (fruitfly.sa.gov.au/outbreak-map) to check if the fruit and vegetable movement restrictions affect home, travel, working or school arrangements.

Incident controller of the fruit fly emergency response Jason Size said it was important for people travelling through the area to use the quarantine bins in the region to dispose of at-risk produce.

“Although this outbreak is technically in Victoria, where Queensland fruit fly is now endemic, we need to protect our Riverland region and it is why it is prohibited to bring fruit across the border into South Australia,” Mr Size said.

“Please use the quarantine bins in the region, when crossing at borders and entering the Riverland, to safely dispose of anything that could be a risk to our hard-working growers and horticulture industry.”

Mr Size also encouraged Riverland residents to take precautions during the summer heat while continuing the fight against Queensland fruit fly.

“We’re grateful that residents pick ripe fruit and collect fallen produce off of the ground – through this simple action we were able to remove more than 400,000kg of at-risk produce in 2024 that fruit fly would otherwise be thriving in,” he said.

“However, in helping us it’s crucial you drink plenty of water, wear protective clothing, and don’t forget to apply sunscreen – we want everyone to stay cool during the warmer weather and enjoy their holidays.”

Mr Size said it was best to check gardens first thing in the morning, or early in the evening, to avoid the hottest parts of the day.

Mr Size also highlighted the critical need to avoid composting host produce.

“Cleaning up fallen fruit from your garden helps break the fruit fly life cycle,” he said.

“But composting or burying at-risk fruit and vegetables can create the perfect environment for fruit flies to breed, or inadvertently protect eggs or larvae.

“Residents need to double bag any at-risk host fruit and vegetables, and put them in the general (red) waste bin – not compost or bury the waste. If you do not have a kerbside red bin service, seal the produce in an airtight plastic bag and contact the Fruit Fly Hotline on 1300 666 010 for advice.”

PIRSA is releasing sterile flies at Lindsay Point, Loxton, Murtho, Murtho B, New Residence, and Pyap until 23 February. Visit the website (fruitfly.sa.gov.au/sit) for more information.

The end date for all Riverland outbreaks is currently 17 March 2025.

Michelle and Dean Drogemuller (centre) with their seven grandchildren, who in 2024 were all enrolled at Cobdogla Primary School. PHOTOS: supplied

All in the family at Cobdogla Primary School

THE Drogemuller family have recently celebrated quite a unique occasion.

As with many long-standing descendants of Cobdogla Primary, it is somewhat of a tradition to follow in the footsteps of those before them. But for Dean and Michelle Drogemuller, of Loveday, 2024 had special significance when they would have all seven grandchildren at Cobdogla Primary School at the same time.

The youngest of their grandchildren, Madison, started reception in term three last year, while the eldest, Lloyd, has just finished year 6 with proud accolades, as he was presented with the Tim Whetstone Certificate of Achievement Award for 2024.

This generation might be leading the way ahead, but before them, their fathers, grandfather and great-grandfather all made their mark at Cobdogla Primary.

The first to enter the hallowed turf at 'Cobby', back in 1927, was great-grandfather, Lloyd Drogemuller (senior).

A time of great growth in the district, along with Cobdogla's expanding school and the growing Drogemuller family tree, Lloyd was seventh of a large family from Cobdogla whose siblings were some of the first pupils at the school in 1917.

Lloyd went on to become a lock master, raising a large family and living at Lock 3, Overland Corner.

Soon the second generation were enrolling at Cobby, with Lloyd and Helen's family. With Dean being the seventh child to follow in his father and sibling's footsteps, they all became heavily involved in the school community.

Dean went on to enjoy a long and rewarding career for over 34 years at ETSA, in Barmera, now SA Powernetworks.

By the time Dean and Michelle's three boys, Steven, and twins Paul and Neil, were ready to start school, it was the 1990s and the Drogemuller name was firmly etched in the woodwork.

Many cousins had also gone to Cobby school, which had now grown to 148 students over six classes. Michelle also began working there, enjoying her job as an SSO. As time moved on their boys all found careers in the Riverland, married and had children of their own.

By 2018, it was time to see the fourth generation of this family enrol at Cobdogla Primary School, when Neil and Amy's eldest son, Lloyd, started in reception.

Not long after, his brother, Rylan, and sister, Alora, would join him. Meanwhile Paul and Joni's boys, Damien and Kyle, joined their cousins, along with Steven and Cindy's girls, Lucy, and the last to enrol, Madison, in July last year.

Education has come a long way at Cobdogla since the school's inception, with many changes over 104 years, but numerous local families, like the Drogemullers, are very proud and grateful to have been a big part of it.

SA schools’ response to Disability Royal Commission

RIVERLAND public and private schools will take steps towards a more inclusive state education system with recommendations made by the Royal Commission into Violence, Abuse, Neglect, and Exploitation of People with Disability.

In 2023, the Disability Royal Commission made 222 recommendations on how to improve laws, policies, structures, and practices to ensure a more inclusive society that supports the independent of people with a disability.

Of those, 15 recommendations are related to the education system.

The State Government, alongside Catholic Education South Australia (CESA), and the Association of Independent Schools of South Australia (AISSA) jointly announced they would prioritise implementing recommendations that seek to drive significant system change to improve learning and wellbeing outcomes, prevent discrimination and exclusion, and ensure a more inclusive education for students with disability.

The agreed actions across sectors include providing annual de-identified data to the Minister for Education covering enrolment refusal or cancellation for students with disability, and consistent information about the grounds, length and use of suspensions, exclusions and expulsions.

We are the first state in the country to come to an agreement with all education sectors and stand together to make a public commitment,” Minister for Education, Training and Skills Blair Boyer said.

“I am proud that South Australia has led the way by joining the public, Catholic and Independent education systems together to respond to the recommendations of the Royal Commission.

“Having a consistent approach across schools is an important step forward for education in our state and a testament to the work of all three sectors – that education should be equitable and accessible for all young people in South Australia.”

Renmark Lions donate $4500 toward RFDS

THE Lions Club of Renmark would like to thank the public who supported our Monster Christmas Raffle fundraiser, at Renmark Square Shopping Centre, during the period leading up to Christmas this year.

The raffle was organised by the Lions Club, with the proceeds plus public donations going to the Royal Flying Doctor Service (RFDS).

Because of the magnificent support of our community with the raffle, both from the significant donations of prizes from our local businesses, and the purchases of tickets and donations by the public, the proceeds and donations were approximately $4250 after expenses being covered by the club.

Renmark Lions Club rounded up this amount from club funds, enabling the club to make this significant total donation of $4500 to the RFDS.

The Monster Christmas Raffle was drawn at the Renmark Square

Shopping Centre, on Friday 20 December 2024, in the presence of RFDS Riverland Support Group Committee members and Renmark Lions Club members.

The donation of $4500 was presented to the RFDS Riverland Committee immediately after the draw.

Renmark Lions Club president Paul Farr said “our club thanks the owners/management of the Renmark Square Shopping Centre for allowing us to conduct this fundraising project and sell our raffle tickets, cakes and puddings again this year”.

“We thank them for providing space within the area adjacent to the sushi shop in the centre of the shopping mall,” Mr Farr said.

“This year’s fundraiser follows a successful Monster Raffle conducted by members and partners of our club in partnership with the shopping centre management at the shopping centre over the past two years.

As in past years, funds raised at this time of year go to RFDS, a much-valued service for country communities, and which has been the usual beneficiary of the proceeds from our Christmas fundraising efforts. We are pleased to be able to give them this total donation of $4500.”

Math and science add up for Riverland year 4 students

AN international report detailing student performance in maths and science has found Riverland year 4 students are among those continuing to improve despite concerns about disrupted learning due to Covid.

The Australian Council for Educational Research (ACER) recently released a report, on behalf of the Commonwealth, State and Territory Governments, analysing the performance of Australia’s year 4 and 8 students in the Trends in International Mathematics and Science Study (TIMSS).

The TIMSS takes place every four years, evaluating the mathematical and scientific knowledge and understanding of year 4 and year 8 students, enabling countries to assess progress over time.

ACER today noted that year 4 students whose first years of schooling occurred during the Covid-19 pandemic have defied concerns about disrupted learning to achieve Australia’s best-ever result in the maths and science assessment.

TIMSS describes achievement of the students on a scale with four international benchmarks, related to their skills and knowledge, and then groups the students in terms of attaining the National Proficient Standard (NPS), very-low performers and very-high performers.

Testing is done in all states and territories and, in South Australia, the proportion of year 4 students at or above the National Proficient Standard for both mathematics and science improved, and the number in the bottom category (very low performers) fell.

Since 1995, maths achievement of year 4 students has improved across all jurisdictions, and from 1995 to 2023 the numbers of very-low performers decreased by 7 percentage points in South Australia.

South Australia also improved significantly in year 4 science between 1995 and 2023, with a 11-point increase in the proportion of students who attained the NPS. Results for year 8 students in South Australia were more mixed, with a decline in maths from 2019 to the tests in 2023, but an improvement in science between 2011 and 2023.

“I’m pleased to see the improvements students have made in important areas like science and maths as we need young people engaged in these topics so they can be part of the economic future of South Australia,” Minister for Education, Training and Skills Blair Boyer said.

“This international report card contains good news for educators in the wake of the global Covid-19 pandemic, which we know disrupted the learning and engagement of young people around the world.”

$100,000 donation to support mental health in rural Australia

ZOETIS has raised $100,000 for the Beyond Blue Support Service to assist mental health initiatives and reduce stigma around mental illness in rural and regional Australia, including the Riverland.

Partnering with Beyond Blue in 2016, and since then raising $900,000, Zoetis has a long-standing commitment to supporting mental health in rural and regional communities, where accessing mental health care can often be challenging due to factors such as geographic isolation, stigma, and financial constraints.

Collecting funds by donating $5 from each sale of the company’s livestock, pig, and poultry vaccines and drenches, Zoetis senior vice president Lance Williams said “(the company) works closely with rural Australia through interactions with the country’s farming community, agricultural stores, veterinarians and their families”.

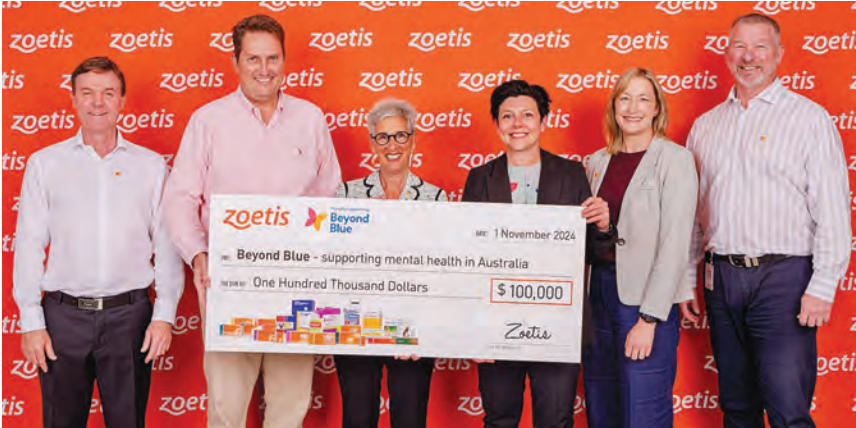

“We are proud to once again be supporting Beyond Blue and the important work they do,” he said.

Factors such as inflation, cost-of-living pressures, climate change, and the lingering impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic have underscored the importance of mental health support, particularly for farmers and rural communities.

The funds raised play a role in sustaining Beyond Blue’s 24/7 mental health support services, which include counselling, advice, and referrals. These services are essential for providing support to individuals in rural and regional areas who face additional barriers to accessing mental health care compared to their urban counterparts. To date, thanks to Zoetis’s donation, more than 15,500 people have been able to get the support they need through the service.

“The partnership between Zoetis and Beyond Blue goes beyond financial contributions,” Mr William said.

“It’s about making sure that no one in rural Australia feels alone in their struggle with mental health, and that help is readily available. We want to encourage early intervention and remind people that reaching out for support is a sign of strength, not weakness. This donation will help ensure that those living in regional areas have access to support when they need it most.”

This year’s donation from Zoetis will allow Beyond Blue to continue to be there for people in rural Australia, so they can access the support they need, whether it be via phone, webchat, or online forums.

For more information on Beyond Blue’s support service, or to access 24/7 free counselling, advice and referrals, call 1300 22 4636, or visit the website to webchat, or email (www.beyondblue.org.au/get-support).

2025 Riverland Bridge Club Handicap Champions: Jennine Williams and Helen Smith 50.51 per cent and 69.30 per cent.

Top tips for holiday electric vehicle use

THE Riverland is among regions seeing increased usage of electric vehicles (EVs) by locals and visitors this summer.

Nearly one-in-ten new car sales are EVs, with more than 100,000 added to Australian roads in 2024. To keep up with growing demand, the number of locations offering fast and ultra-fast chargers has nearly doubled in a year, reaching 1059 locations nationwide, with over 1849 high-power public chargers.

Electric Vehicle Council head of legal, policy and advocacy Aman Gaur said "Australians love a summer road trip, and more of them than ever before will now be clocking up the kilometres in electric cars".

"Australia has hit an annual record for new EV sales, surpassing 100,000 this year," Mr Gaur said.

"That means we should expect to see more EVs on our roads and accessing public chargers during these holidays.

"Luckily, the public charging network is growing to keep up with demand. Over the past year, the number of public chargers and their locations has nearly doubled across the country, with more public and private investment in the pipeline to expand this further in the new year.

"Charging this summer is set to be smoother than ever, thanks to more public chargers in more places and a maturing EV charging sector that has overcome initial challenges."

Mr Gaur said increased usage of EVs benefitted both tourism in communities and the environment.

"More EVs on our roads is a good thing, making summer holidays as cheap as possible and reducing pollution in our communities," he said.

"For many, this will be their first holiday road trip behind the wheel of an EV, navigating the best ways to charge along the way.

"Some of our top tips for EV charging etiquette are don't overstay your charge, leave home with a full battery, and be courteous to your fellow EV drivers."

Top tips for EV charging etiquette:

❑ Leave home with a full charge and charge up at the place you're staying before you head home if you can. This will reduce the amount you need to use public fast chargers, and create more availability for others.

❑ Don't overstay your charge. When you're using public chargers, take what you need, then make space for the next driver, especially if there's a queue. Topping up to 80 per cent will take a lot less time than filling all the way to 100 per cent, because the charging rate slows down as the vehicle battery gets close to full.

❑ Be kind. There's more than 100,000 new EVs on our roads this year, with some drivers set to use public fast chargers for the first time this summer holidays. If someone needs help understanding how it works, offer to lend a hand.

❑ Look after the charging equipment. Put the charging equipment back as you found it to avoid damage and for the next person's ease. If the unit is damaged or impaired, report it immediately to the charge point operator.

The Electric Vehicle Council is also asking EV drivers to help improve the public charging network further by completing a survey following their summer driving experiences. Interested drivers can sign up online (www.electricvehiclecouncil.com.au/ev-ownership-survey-2024/) to complete the survey.

Data shows Riverlanders have damaging attitudes towards suntanning

CONCERNING new data shows that tanning culture is still a significant issue for Riverlanders.

Funded by the Cancer Council, data from the Australian Bureau of Statistics has revealed more than 100,000 South Australians have tried to get a suntan in the last 12 months.

Cancer Council SA prevention co-ordinator Diem Tran said dangerous attitudes towards suntanning are a major concern.

"This new data shows us that not enough South Aussies are actioning the SunSmart message," she said.

"Any damage to the skin caused by overexposure to harmful UV radiation from the sun, including a tan or sunburn, increases your risk of developing skin cancer.

"There's no such thing as a safe tan. Every time your skin tans, the damage adds up to increase your risk.

"Suntanning contributes to two in three Australians getting skin cancer in their lifetime. As we approach the holiday season with many South Australians spending more time outdoors and heading to the beach, sun protection is particularly important."

"When the UV is 3 and above, we really encourage South Aussies to slip on sun protective clothing that covers your arms and legs, slop on SPF 50 or 50+ sunscreen, slap on a broad-brimmed or bucket hat, slide on sunglasses and seek shade wherever possible."

South Australians can check the UV Index and recommended sun protection times by downloading the SunSmart Global UV app.

Koala State number plate grants issued to SA's dedicated wildlife rescue organisations

RIVERLAND motorists can now help fund wildlife rescue organisations to care for native animals through the sale of Koala State number plants.

Going towards the South Australian Wildlife Rehabilitation Grants programs, the Koala State number plates provide a one-off $50 donation to help fund wildlife rescue organisations.

Helping to cover the cost of new supplies, equipment, training, or vet fees, the Koala State number plates cost $151, which includes a $70 plate fee, a $50 donation, and a $31 reallocation fee for vehicles already registered in SA.

So far, 2200 plates have been purchased, with a total of 12 licensed not-for-profit and volunteers receiving first round grants of up to $5000.

"Wildlife carers sacrifice their time and money to look after our wildlife, often working around the clock to provide for sick or injured animals," Minister for Climate, Environment and Water Susan Close said.

"I'm pleased these grants will assist the selfless volunteers and rescue groups to better care for wildlife through improved facilities, food supply or health care.

"A big thank you to those South Australians who have rallied around our wildlife organisations by purchasing a Koala State number plate. The plates are still available for purchase and make an ideal Christmas gift for friends and family."

To purchase a Koala Plate, visit the website (www.ezy-plates.sa.gov.au).

Our Town supports Berri to make a difference

MADISON EASTMOND

AIMING to develop the capabilities of Riverlanders to support each other in the face of mental health and wellbeing challenges, the Our Town Berri team has spent the past five years establishing community-led initiatives to encourage inclusion, connection, and town pride.

Supported through seed funding and short-term government grants, Our Town is a place-based, mental health scheme that is taking place across six rural South Australian towns, in which teams consult deeply with members of their communities and then provide networking and learning opportunities in response.

Established in 2019 with seven Berri volunteers, Our Town Berri conducted one year of research before acting to establish the true wellbeing needs of the Riverland community, with four key insights of improvement including:

- ❑ ‘The light on the hill went out’: Berri wants to reclaim and build an identity.
- ❑ ‘It’s hard to see the river for the reeds’: Services should connect and network to support the wellbeing of a community, but many are falling through the cracks.
- ❑ ‘The river connects us’: When generations and groups come together, the impact is felt across the community.
- ❑ ‘Navigating uncharted waters’: Life events and transitions have connections to wellbeing, but strong communities support these transitions.

Now currently operating with 10 core team members and support from the South Australian Centre for Social Innovation, Our Town community steward Julie Ahrens said the philanthropic work the team has undertaken has made a “significant impact” within the Berri community.

“Our Town Berri is truly unique, in the fact we are not aligned to any service,” she said.

“We are a not-for-profit, community-led initiative and have charitable status. Our Town is completely community led, as well as owned — if someone comes to us with an idea, we help to involve and network community members to make it happen.

“We help with support processes, innovation, and aid the community in leading their own change.

“Everything we do is an attempt to capacity build in the community and tailored to the insights we discovered when speaking to Berri residents.

“We also trial programs to see what is working and what isn’t, so we know we are making a productive impact.

“We have truly listened to our community and the programs we have supported are being incredibly well received.”

In just the past year, Our Town Berri has continued to support ongoing initiatives, as well as help introduce new programs into the Riverland town, including:

- ❑ Riverland Families First: A Mother’s Group program, with inactivities that include art sessions, nutrition workshops, and yoga classes.
- ❑ Reconciliation Garden: A collaboration with Berri Regional Secondary College and the Aboriginal community, students have engaged to create a garden and fire-pit area on campus.
- ❑ Berri Primary School Art Wellbeing Program: A wellbeing-focused art group led by local artist Karl Raams, which provides a creative and supportive space for students to engage with mental health topics through art.
- ❑ Native Food and Culture program: Held at Berri Regional Secondary College, the program empowers First Nations girls and women to explore careers in food and agriculture.
- ❑ Community Breakfasts: Core team members hosted community breakfasts, fostering connections with around 30 Riverlanders.
- ❑ Friends of Berri: Regular informal meetings saw participation and discussion from local people about community needs and opportunities.
- ❑ Youth Mental Health First Aid Training with KAIZEN Business.
- ❑ Raise Mentoring: 13 year 8 students and volunteer mentors met for one hour every week throughout terms two and three, with a focus to build resilience, school belonging, and set goals.

- ❑ Volunteering: More than 5000 hours of student volunteer efforts through an Our Town Berri Community Connector.
- ❑ The Nunga Driving program: Supporting young Indigenous people to get their driver’s license by providing subsidised driving lessons.
- ❑ P.O.T. LUCK You Are Enough edition: An open mic and stage for local artists, writers, and creatives alike to share in an evening of storytelling and connection.
- ❑ Baby and Child First Aid Training.

“We work to people’s strengths and create community opportunities with them,” Ms Ahrens said.

“Our support creates rich connection and we are always trying new things.”

Most recently, Our Town Berri was one of four organisations in South Australia invited to the second roundtable of the Investment Dialogue for Australia’s Children in Adelaide last year as an example of an exceptional model community-led work and impact.

“In the Riverland, all the different towns have different strengths,” Ms Ahrens said.

“I think when you only identify Berri as ‘the business centre’, you can forget the depths of the people, it’s diversity, and the amazing opportunities that happen in Berri that can further be elevated.

“Our Town Berri can be an empowered, well-connected, and mentally healthy community, and that’s what we’re continuing to see and achieve.”

Supported through seed funding and short-term government grants, Our Town Berri consults deeply with members of their communities and then provide networking and learning opportunities in response.

Berri Library reopening

LOCALS now have a new place to borrow books, learn and connect with the Berri Library reopening next week.

The Berri Library at 29 Riverview Drive will be open to the public on Monday 13 January, with a formal opening event to occur in February.

Berri Barmera Council Mayor Ella Winnall said the library is a place for both community members and visitors to enjoy.

“We are excited to be reopening the Berri Library at a new location,” Mayor Winnall said.

“The building has been re-fit with direct input from the community, via the Library Services and Community Space Advisory Group.

“The Berri Library will serve as a key public space in the centre of town and we are looking forward to the community being able to utilise the new location and all that it offers.”

The Berri Library at Riverview Drive will help activate the Berri riverfront and along with housing books and a historical collection, it also features a children’s area, a meeting room and spaces to read, study and work.

“The Berri Library continues to have a great collection with almost 20,000 items and will continue to contain items which are available in a variety of formats, for differing ages and interests to ensure there is plenty for everyone in the community to enjoy,” Mayor Winnall said.

“In addition to the Berri Library collection, library users also have access to 2.83 million items from 130 libraries across South Australia, via the One Card network.”

Mayor Winnall said council is excited to welcome locals to the new location and all the services and events that library users know and love — such as Rhyme Time and children’s holiday activities — which will begin in due course.

“Libraries are about so much more than books,” Mayor Winnall said.

“We know that our regular library users will enjoy the new site, and we also look forward to welcoming new library users to come and see what the Berri Library has to offer.”

Details about the formal opening event next month will be advised soon.

The new Berri Library features a children’s area and spaces to read, study and work.

SLIP SLOP SLAP SEEK SLIDE

The below is a copy of a letter from SA MINISTER FOR PLANNING NICK CHAMPION to Renmark woman ANN RYAN regarding the proposed JANE ELIZA ESTATE DEVELOPMENT...

DEAR Ms Ryan,
Thank you for your recent correspondence to the Premier Peter Malinauskas regarding the Master Plan for the Jane Eliza Development, at Renmark.
As the matters you have raised fall within my portfolio responsibilities, the Premier has asked me to respond on his behalf. As you are aware, Wel.Co is currently preparing a master plan and associated investigations for the Jane Eliza Project.
The Master Plan process will explore opportunities for development to occur within the designated ‘study area’, including residential, commercial and mixed-use activities, a marina and associated industries.
Presently, the ‘study area’ mostly falls within the Neighbourhood Zone and Infrastructure (Ferry and Marina Facilities) Zone of the Planning and Design Code (the Code).
Notwithstanding this, the entire ‘study area’ is located within the ‘River Murray 1956 Flood Level’, with a portion located in the ‘River Murray Floodplain Protection Area’.

In addition, the primary study area is subject to the following overlays in the Code:
☐ Hazards (Bushfire – Urban Interface) Overlay
☐ Hazards (Flooding — Evidence Required) Overlay
☐ Murray-Darling Basin Overlay
☐ Native Vegetation Overlay
☐ Water Resources Area Overlay
The current planning provisions will only partially facilitate the proposed development options being contemplated by the Renmark Paringa Council and Wel.Co. Therefore, an amendment to the Code to change the zoning would be required. This process involves detailed investigations and assessment of the suitability of the proposal, including the implications of building in a flood-prone area, the potential for the proposed development and associated infrastructure to impact on the existing development and surrounding environment.

The Code Amendment process also includes engagement with relevant government agencies and key stakeholders whose expertise would be relied upon to determine the suitability of the proposal, including the environmental and flood implications, before a decision would be made to approve the Code Amendment or not.
I can confirm that council has not sought to initiate a Code Amendment for the Jane Eliza Project. Furthermore, if a Code Amendment was initiated, it would be publicly notified, and the community would be given an opportunity to participate in the public consultation process before any decision is made. I trust this information is of assistance.
- NICK CHAMPION
Minister for Planning

Local drivers caught for road offences

NUMEROUS drivers are set to appear in court after being caught for road offences in the Riverland last month.
About 12.30 am, Saturday 14 December, Berri police were on the Sturt Highway, at Renmark, and observed a silver Holden SUV driving without any headlights. Patrols stopped the driver, who failed to produce a valid driver’s licence.
The 36-year-old woman, from Lewiston, was arrested and charged with failing to comply with a driver direction, driving without lights and driving without a licence. She was bailed to appear in the Berri Magistrates Court on 20 January.
Later that day police were on Strangman Road, at Waikerie, when a white Holden sedan was stopped and the driver submitted to a drug test. The 41-year-old driver, from Waikerie, tested positive to methamphetamine and cannabis. He was issued a three-month loss of licence and his sample will be submitted for further analysis.
Also on Saturday 14 December, Murray Mallee Police were conducting speed detection duties on the Sturt Highway, when a driver was clocked traveling at 125km/h in a 80km/h zone. The driver was stopped and issued an on-the-spot expiation notice for exceeding the speed limit and was issued a six-month loss of licence.
On Sunday 15 December, police were on the Sturt Highway, at Paisley, when they stopped a white Holden sedan and submitted the driver to a drug test. The 39-year-old man, from Munno Para West, returned a positive result to cannabis. He was issued a three-month loss of licence and his sample will be submitted for further analysis.
Also on that day, Berri police were conducting speed detection duties on the Old Sturt Highway, at Glossop, when a vehicle was clocked driving at 70km/h in a 60km/h zone.
The driver was stopped, and checks revealed the 67-year-old man’s licence was suspended. He was reported for driving suspended, exceeding the speed limit and his vehicle was impounded.

He will be summonsed to appear in the Berri Magistrates Court at a later date.
Then, on Monday 16 December, a maroon ford SUV was observed doing burnouts on Draper Road, in Berri. Patrols stopped the driver nearby and submitted him to a breath test, which returned a positive result of 0.076.
The 29-year-old was reported for misuse of a motor vehicle and issued an expiation notice for exceeding the legal limit. He will be summonsed to appear in the Berri Magistrates Court at a later date.

Renmark man caught drink driving at .121

POLICE detected a Renmark man driving at more than double the legal alcohol limit last month.
On Sunday 22 December, Renmark Police stopped a red Holden hatchback on Red Gum Street, at Renmark, and submitted the driver to a breath test that returned a positive result of 0.121.
The 29-year-old Renmark man was reported for drink driving and issued a six month loss of licence, and he will be summonsed to appear in the Berri Magistrates Court at a later date.
Also, on Friday 20 December, Berri Police stopped a silver Ford utility on Kay Avenue, Berri, and submitted the driver to a breath test, which returned a positive result of 0.090.
The 31-year-old male driver was reported for drink driving and issued a six month loss of licence, and he will be summonsed to appear in the Berri Magistrates Court at a later date.
On Saturday 21 December, Murry Mallee Police stopped a black Ford SUV on the Sturt Highway, at Blanchetown, and submitted the driver to a roadside drug test which returned a positive result for cannabis.
Checks revealed the 27-year-old Loxton woman was also suspended from driving. She was reported for drug driving and driving suspended. Her sample will be sent for further forensic analysis.

Riverland-based MLC NICOLA CENTOFANTI has provided the following opinion piece regarding concerns for regional South Australian communities...

Regional SA: Resilient, but why should we have to be?

WHY is it, when people talk about resilience, they appear to only speak about the regions? And how did we get here?

Yes, regional communities are famously resilient. It's a badge of honour for many of us, and rightly so.

But why is it that regions are constantly asked to demonstrate this resilience at a level far beyond what is expected of metropolitan areas? Why is it acceptable for rural towns to endure substandard infrastructure, limited services, and economic neglect, while Adelaide thrives with the advantages of constant investment and development?

Distance is a reality of regional life, no one disputes that. Not every town can, or should, have every service available. However, every region deserves access to a reasonable standard of essential services.

For too long, this has been treated as an unattainable luxury, rather than the basic right of the people who keep this state's agricultural and resource sectors alive.

Take healthcare, for example. I was shocked to find out that Mount Gambier Hospital does not have ICU beds.

How is it that the second largest city – that happens to be in regional SA – cannot support its own critically ill patients?

Furthermore, the absence of general practitioners in rural areas isn't just inconvenient, it's a threat to public health. The same can be said for aged care, and mental health services; essentials that underpin a community's wellbeing.

And what about schools? Time and time again, regional families are expected to settle for underfunded, and understaffed schools with fewer resources than their urban counterparts.

Then there's the shrinking presence of banks in country towns, leaving residents and businesses struggling to manage their finances. And for those families wanting to access childcare, the waitlists are often endless.

Supermarkets, when they exist, often carry fewer choices at higher prices. A bitter irony for communities surrounded by farmland that feeds the state.

Even something as simple as maintaining quality roads can seem out of reach in regional South Australia, as patchwork fixes and neglect leave residents wondering why their taxes don't stretch beyond Adelaide city limits.

What's especially frustrating is the sense of being overlooked, even as regional South Australia provides so much for the state. From the paddocks of the Eyre Peninsula to the vineyards of the Coonawarra, regional communities drive economic output in ways that Adelaide relies on but rarely acknowledges.

And yet, time and again, they are last in line for investment, development, and opportunities to grow. It's not just about fairness. It's well past time to call for regional equity.

Because it is about sustaining these communities for future generations. It's about future-proofing our food and fibre security.

It's about galvanising over 50 per cent of this state's export product. It's about ensuring the bulk of our economy continues to tick over.

If schools, healthcare, and infrastructure continue to fall short, regional areas won't just lose people, they'll lose the vibrant social fabric that makes them worth living in.

Families will move closer to the city in search of better prospects, draining the countryside of its lifeblood.

Without policy intervention to address these inequities, the regions risk being left to wither. Yes, regional South Australians are tough, but why should we always have to be?

Why should resilience be treated as an excuse for neglect?

Why does regional South Australia always seem to miss out? It doesn't have to be this way. Regional equity means recognising that these communities deserve investment and opportunity commensurate with their contributions to the state.

It means ensuring every region has access to good schools, reliable healthcare, essential services, and the infrastructure to not just survive but to thrive.

It's about valuing the regions not as an afterthought, but as an integral part of South Australia's future.

Our regional towns deserve more than admiration for their resilience, they deserve the respect of meaningful support. Let's make sure they get it.

Kids Helpline and Instagram seek to tackle teen bullying

RIVERLAND youths experiencing negative effects from bullying are encouraged to seek support through a new campaign from Kids Helpline and Instagram.

With Australia ranking second highest for teen bullying among 24 OECD countries, Kids Helpline has collaborated with Instagram to launch 'How Do You Mean?', a campaign to empower young people to recognise, report, and seek support for bullying.

The Instagram series features Australian content creators sharing their own experiencing and practical tips to support young people experience bullying online and, in their lives, with helpful tips on how to activate Instagram features to support wellbeing online.

With more than 178,000 individuals having accessed bullying-related information on Kids Helpline's website this year, Kids Helpline virtual services manager Tony FitzGerald said education is key to helping teens understand, recognise, and respond to bullying and to reassure those experiencing bullying that there is a way through it.

"'How Do You Mean?' provides practical strategies and encourages open conversations to create more compassionate, safer spaces for everyone," he said.

"The mental health impact of bullying can be profound, impacting self-esteem and overall wellbeing, which is why it's vital to remember that support is always available."

Meta's regional director of public policy Mia Garlick said recognition for the importance of protecting the wellbeing and safety of young people online was increasing.

"Our policies prohibit bullying and harassment and we invest significantly to prevent it on our services," she said.

"We work closely with experts and organisations like Kids Helpline to ensure that our efforts are effective.

"We are very proud to launch 'How Do You Mean?' in collaboration with Kids Helpline and remain committed to creating a safe and inclusive environment for all users, especially young people.

"This campaign surfaces some of the tools available to support young people against bullying on Instagram."

Kids Helpline's practical steps for managing bullying, include:

- ❑ Get Social Support: Spend time with friends who value you for who you are or focus on building new friendships.
- ❑ Do What You Love: Engage in enjoyable activities to reduce stress.
- ❑ Focus on Strengths: Celebrate your uniqueness and talents, rather than letting bullying define you.
- ❑ Seek Professional Help: Experts can provide tailored advice and support.
- ❑ Report it: It's important to report bullying to a trusted adult or through online tools. The only person who benefits from you not reporting is the person doing the bullying.
- ❑ Remember It Gets Better: Bullying is a temporary challenge - many have overcome it and so can you.

Kids Helpline is available 24/7 for any reason, young people can call 1800 551 800 or chat online at (www.kidshelpline.com.au).

Riverland smashes state volleyball event

THREE Riverland high schools tasted success at a statewide volleyball event in Adelaide last month.

Loxton, Renmark and Waikerie all brought home gold medals from the South Australian Volleyball Schools Smash event, held from 9-13 December.

Traditional volleyball powerhouse Loxton claimed three gold medals, winning the 10 boys, 12 girls and 11-12 boys.

Waikerie won gold medals in both the 10 girls and 7-8 boys divisions, while Renmark claimed gold in the 7 girls.

After the SA event, teams from Renmark High School went on to compete at the Volleyball Australia Schools Cup on the Gold Coast.

New chief for MVFNL

MAINTAINING momentum – after a solid first two years of existence – is the goal of the new president of the region’s second largest football league.

Former Brown’s Well Football Club president Andrew Schultz has been announced Murray Valley Football Netball League (MVFNL) president, taking over from inaugural chair – and former long-serving Riverland Football League chief – Neil Martinson.

Mr Schultz said a favourable personal schedule would allow him to prioritise the role and guide the league, formerly known as the RFL Independents.

“Neil indicated late last year he would like to step back,” Schultz said.

“Initially I didn’t put my hand up because I wasn’t sure how much time it would take.

“To get the league started we thought it would be best to have someone who had done it before... and make sure we got everything going in the right direction.

“Now we’ve got momentum with the league... (and) I know more about my time commitments, so it seemed like a good time to step back in.”

Mr Schultz said the addition of Victorian club Murrayville to the MVNFL, following the demise of the Mallee Football League at the end of season 2022, had benefited the competition, with the Blues taking out the 2024 football flag.

“Sedan Cambrai were pretty dominant for a few years, and all the clubs try to lift to get to that level,” he said.

“You get extra clubs in like Murrayville who come from a different league... they’ve pooled their resources and they’ve been really competitive. They’ve been a really good asset to the league.”

Mr Schultz expected the fixture for the 2025 season to be finalised within the next week.

“Having a seven-club competition is one of the hardest draws you’ve ever got to work on,” he said.

“We’ve worked pretty hard to get a structure going now where we get that extra three rounds in for the year.”

Schultz said continuing to build on the league’s positive momentum was a goal for the upcoming season.

“I’m just hoping for good, competitive football again,” he said.

“(We’ll) see what direction we need to go. Between the executive group and the clubs, we’ll work together to keep things going, and where we can make little improvements, we will.

“We want to give Neil Martinson a big thank you – on behalf of the clubs and the league – for his efforts in establishing the MVFNL.”

Westies women invite locals to Barmera

RIVERLAND girls and women interested in playing Aussie rules have been urged to attend a West Adelaide Football Club training session in Barmera this weekend. The Bloods’ senior SANFLW senior team will train at the Barmera-Monash Football Club oval on Sunday morning, with locals invited to join in.

The initiative comprises a session for girls aged 10-12, followed by one for senior women (16+).

A Riverland Football League spokesperson said the sessions aimed to help local participants “learn some new skills” and potentially play competitively in 2025.

“New and experienced players are welcome to attend, with the playing group conducting one-hour sessions for two different age groups,” the spokesperson said.

The girls 10-12 session runs from 10am to 11am, followed immediately by the senior session (11am to 12 noon).

To register for the first session, visit (<https://tinyurl.com/54vz32j5>). To register for the later session, visit (<https://tinyurl.com/mrywdzxw>).

Ramco signs Murrayville premiership player

RAMCO’s football side has landed a handy recruit, with the acquisition of Murrayville premiership player Jesse Bannister.

The accomplished utility was a valuable mid-season 2024 pick-up for Murrayville, which thrashed Brown’s Well by 82 points in the Murray Valley Football League grand final.

Bannister previously played senior football for RFL club Barmera-Monash.

“Jesse is a hard-at-it midfielder who will fit in nicely at the Chookshed,” Ramco said via social media.

“We welcome Jesse and family to Ramco.”

Since winning the 2024 flag, Murrayville has replaced premiership coach Mick Durdin with premiership player Keenan Wilksch.

New chief for MVFNL

HUGH SCHUITMAKER

MAINTAINING momentum – after a solid first two years of existence – is the goal of the new president of the region’s second largest football league.

Former Brown’s Well Football Club president Andrew Schultz has been announced Murray Valley Football Netball League (MVFNL) president, taking over from inaugural chair – and former long-serving Riverland Football League chief – Neil Martinson.

Mr Schultz said a favourable personal schedule would allow him to prioritise the role and guide the league, formerly known as the RFL Independents.

“Neil indicated late last year he would like to step back,” Schultz said.

“Initially I didn’t put my hand up because I wasn’t sure how much time it would take.

“To get the league started we thought it would be best to have someone who had done it before... and make sure we got everything going in the right direction.

Change of scenery

CANDID character actor Miriam Margolyes calls Australia home, but when a film role looked like taking her to New Zealand, she became struck by how little she knows about our Kiwi cousins across the ditch.

Determined to overcome what she terms as her own ignorance, Margolyes sets out to learn more about the Land of the Long White Cloud and its inhabitants in this two-part road trip adventure.

Beginning in capital Wellington, self-proclaimed nosy parker Margolyes wants to find the heart and soul of the country – but did not expect it would be located at a rugby game, a sport she “loathes”. Can 30,000 die-hard fans (and meeting national women’s team, the Black Ferns) change her mind?

The next stop on Margolyes’ odyssey is the Whanganui River, where the local Māori iwi (or tribe) have won legal ‘personhood’ for the sacred waterway – a measure that will protect the health and life force of the river by recognising its rights as a living being.

Taking the long route to Auckland, the Harry Potter star confronts her antipathy for “grown-ups living in a fantasy world” on a stop in Hobbiton, calls into a refugee resettlement centre and visits a Panguru school where all the classes are conducted in Māori language.

Never one to shy away from asking difficult questions, the straight-shooting Margolyes uses her gift for connecting with everyday people to uncover the challenges New Zealanders face in the world today and learns unexpected lessons along the way.
